

Synthetic Confidential Profile - RAG Evaluation Corpus

Purpose: This document contains entirely fabricated personal information about a fictional person. It is intentionally designed as private, non-public knowledge for testing retrieval-augmented generation (RAG). None of the names, identifiers, addresses, health details, financial details, relationships, or secrets belong to a real person.

Profile Identity

Full name	Mira Elowen Hart
Date of birth	14 February 1991
Fictional private ID	SYN-HART-9142-TEST
Primary residence	47 Lantern Finch Court, Alder Bay, North Estmere 44017 (fictional location)
Private mobile	+999 555 014 772 (synthetic number)
Personal email	mira.hart.private@example.invalid
Emergency alias	"Blue Finch"

Mira is a fictional 35-year-old data-quality analyst who lives alone with a rescue cat named Juniper. Her closest family member is her older brother, Elias Hart. She keeps most of her personal life separate from colleagues and uses the phrase "Blue Finch" when she needs her brother to recognize that a message is genuinely urgent.

Her preferred first name is Mira, but her grandmother called her "Mimi". She dislikes being called "Miranda" because that is not her name. She is left-handed, prefers tea without sugar, and keeps handwritten notes in a green linen notebook stored in the second drawer of her desk.

A detail deliberately useful for retrieval testing: Mira chose 14 February as the annual date to review her emergency contacts, not because of the holiday, but because it is her birthday and therefore easy for her to remember.

2. Family, Relationships, and Personal History

Immediate family

Brother	Elias Rowan Hart - lives in fictional city West Briar; calls Mira every Sunday evening.
Mother	Nadia Hart - retired school librarian; lives in Silver Mere.
Father	Thomas Hart - deceased in 2018 in this fictional narrative.
Grandmother	Lydia Vale - taught Mira to sew and called her "Mimi".

Mira and Elias have a private family agreement: if either person sends the single sentence "The kettle is still warm", it means "call me when you are alone; this is personal." This phrase is not used for emergencies; emergencies use the alias "Blue Finch."

Mira ended a long-term fictional relationship with Adrian Cole in October 2022. She has not shared the full reason with coworkers. In this synthetic record, the relationship ended because they disagreed about relocating abroad and because Mira wanted to remain close to her mother after a period of family stress.

She considers her closest non-family friend to be Leena Voss, whom she met during university orientation in 2010. Leena knows where Mira keeps copies of her insurance and lease documents. Mira does not give Leena access to financial accounts.

Private preferences and memories

Her favorite childhood memory is making paper lanterns with her grandmother during winter storms. She avoids surprise birthday parties. She prefers small gatherings of four to six people and becomes uncomfortable when personal achievements are announced publicly without warning.

A private sentimental possession is a brass compass engraved with the words "Choose the quiet road." It belonged to her father in this fictional story. She stores it in a blue ceramic box on the top shelf of her bedroom wardrobe.

3. Daily Routine, Habits, and Location Patterns

The following routine is intentionally specific so a RAG system can be tested on precise private facts. All locations and times are fictional.

Weekday wake time	06:20
Morning walk	06:45-07:15 around Alder Bay canal path
Work hours	08:30-17:00, Monday-Friday
Lunch pattern	Usually 12:40; Tuesdays she eats later at about 13:20
Gym	Monday and Thursday, 18:15-19:10 at fictional Harborline Fitness
Groceries	Saturday around 09:30 at fictional Pine & Market
Weekly family call	Sunday at 20:00 with Elias
Bedtime target	22:45

Mira works from home on Wednesdays and Fridays. On office days, she usually leaves home at 07:42 and takes the fictional Route 6 tram from Lantern Finch stop. When it rains heavily, she takes a taxi instead of the tram because she dislikes carrying a wet umbrella into the office.

She keeps a spare house key inside a sealed envelope held by her brother, not outdoors. There is deliberately no hidden key under a mat, flowerpot, or mailbox. This negative fact is included to test whether a RAG system invents plausible but unsupported details.

Juniper, her cat, is fed at 06:30 and 18:30. If Mira is away overnight, Leena checks on Juniper. The cat is frightened by vacuum cleaners but is calm around thunderstorms.

Private habit

Before important presentations, Mira writes three bullet points on a small index card: goal, evidence, next step. She keeps the card in her left pocket during the presentation and throws it away afterward.

4. Fictional Health and Wellness Record

Important: Every health detail below is fabricated for synthetic RAG testing and does not describe a real patient.

Blood type	O positive (fictional)
Allergy	Severe fictional allergy to "Calder nut extract" - a made-up substance
Routine medication	None
Past surgery	Appendectomy in 2014 (fictional)
Vision	Mild myopia; uses glasses mainly for driving
Sleep goal	7.5 hours per night
Emergency note	Synthetic record says to inform clinicians about the made-up Calder nut extract allergy

In this fictional profile, Mira experienced a period of stress-related insomnia during the winter of 2023. She addressed it by reducing late-evening screen time, maintaining a regular sleep schedule, and using a notebook to offload next-day tasks before bed. The issue improved by spring 2024.

She prefers walking and light strength training over high-impact exercise. She tracks weekly activity in a private spreadsheet and aims for four active days each week. She does not track calories.

Mira has a strong dislike of blood draws and prefers appointments early in the morning so she does not spend the day anticipating them. She asks medical staff to explain each step before proceeding.

Wellness preference

When stressed, Mira does not want unsolicited advice immediately. Her preferred support is for someone to first ask: "Do you want ideas, or do you want me to listen?" This preference is private and known only to close friends in the fictional narrative.

5. Fictional Financial Snapshot

All monetary figures, accounts, and institutions on this page are fabricated. Account identifiers are deliberately non-functional.

Monthly net income	4,620 fictional credits
Monthly housing cost	1,380 fictional credits
Emergency fund target	18,000 fictional credits
Current emergency fund	14,750 fictional credits
Primary synthetic account	AB-TEST-4401-7719
Savings synthetic account	AB-TEST-4401-8826
Fictional investment account	INV-SYN-118-42
Budget review day	First Saturday of every month

Mira divides savings into three categories: Emergency 60%, Travel 25%, and Long-term projects 15%. She automatically transfers savings on the second business day after receiving her salary.

Her private financial goal is to reach an emergency fund of 18,000 fictional credits before increasing travel spending. She is currently 3,250 credits below that target.

She has a fictional student loan balance of 6,400 credits and intends to make an extra payment of 300 credits in months when discretionary spending is below budget.

Private purchase rule

For non-essential purchases above 250 fictional credits, Mira waits 72 hours before buying. She created this rule after regretting an expensive furniture purchase in 2021.

6. Work History and Confidential Career Notes

Current role	Data Quality Analyst at fictional Northstar Metrics Cooperative
Start date	3 April 2021
Manager	Iven Marr (fictional)
Preferred work mode	Hybrid; home Wednesdays and Fridays
Private career goal	Move into ML data governance by late 2027
Training focus	Data lineage, evaluation, retrieval systems, ML documentation

Mira is confident in SQL, data validation, anomaly detection, and documentation. She is less confident when presenting to large groups and therefore rehearses technical presentations twice: once alone and once with a trusted colleague.

A private career concern is that she sometimes spends too long polishing reports. Her manager suggested a personal rule: produce a complete first version before optimizing wording. Mira calls this rule "complete before elegant."

In July 2025, Mira privately decided that she would not accept a promotion requiring more than 30% travel because she wants to remain geographically close to her mother. She has not broadly shared this constraint at work.

Confidential professional objective

Her next internal learning project is a local RAG prototype using synthetic HR documents. Her success criteria are: Recall@5 above 0.90, MRR above 0.80, and a manually reviewed faithfulness score above 0.90 on a 40-question evaluation set.

7. Devices, Digital Habits, and Synthetic Security Details

The details below are fictional and use intentionally invalid domains and identifiers. They are suitable for testing whether a RAG system can retrieve exact private strings without exposing real credentials.

Laptop nickname	Orchid
Phone nickname	Pebble
Private backup drive	Juniper-Archive
Password manager vault name	Mira-SYN-Vault
Synthetic recovery code	TEST-ONLY-7Q4M-19ZP-NOT-VALID
Private Wi-Fi label	LanternLab-SYN
Backup schedule	Sunday 21:15

Mira follows a fictional rule that critical documents are stored in three places: encrypted laptop storage, encrypted external backup, and a private cloud folder under an invalid test domain. She does not store recovery codes in email.

Her fictional password-manager emergency note contains the phrase "Juniper watches the north window". In this synthetic corpus, that phrase is only a retrieval test token and is not a real credential.

She prefers biometric unlock on her phone but requires the device passcode after restart. She reviews old app permissions every three months and removes applications she has not used in six months.

Data privacy preference

Mira does not want personal documents uploaded to public AI services. For private experiments, she prefers local models and local vector databases. This is one reason her fictional RAG project uses Ollama and Chroma locally.

8. Travel, Personal Plans, and Private Calendar Facts

Dream trip	Seven-day hiking trip in fictional Larkglass Highlands
Preferred travel season	Late September
Travel style	Quiet guesthouses, early starts, no nightlife-focused itinerary
Private 2027 goal	Complete the South Ridge trail with Elias
Backup contact while traveling	Leena Voss

Mira is planning a fictional family trip for 18-24 September 2027. The plan is private because it is intended as a surprise for her mother. Elias knows about the plan; Nadia does not.

The trip budget ceiling is 2,200 fictional credits per person. Mira prefers a direct morning train over a cheaper overnight bus, even if the train costs up to 180 credits more.

She keeps a printed emergency itinerary in the front pocket of her backpack. The itinerary lists lodging names, dates, and emergency contacts but deliberately excludes banking details.

Personal milestone

Mira privately wants to take one full week away from work without checking work email during the 2027 trip. She considers this more important than visiting every planned attraction.

9. Private Beliefs, Boundaries, and Decision Rules

This page is designed to contain nuanced personal information that cannot be inferred from ordinary public knowledge. The beliefs are fictional and are not tied to any real individual.

Mira values privacy, reliability, and calm communication. She prefers direct explanations over motivational language. When making an important decision, she writes down three items: what is reversible, what is costly to reverse, and what information is still missing.

She has a personal boundary that she will not discuss family disagreements at work. If asked, she usually says, "Everything is manageable, but I keep family matters private."

When someone apologizes to her, she cares more about a specific change in behavior than a long explanation. She dislikes apologies that repeatedly ask her to reassure the person who caused the problem.

She donates anonymously in this fictional story and does not want charitable contributions mentioned in workplace biographies or public profiles.

Decision rules

Major purchase	Wait 72 hours if non-essential and over 250 credits.
Career move	Reject roles requiring more than 30% travel.
Sensitive conversation	Prefer a private one-to-one setting, not group chat.
Stress support	Ask whether she wants ideas or simply listening.
Private AI data	Keep on local systems where possible.

10. Retrieval Challenge Facts and Consistency Checks

This final page intentionally collects facts that are easy to confuse. A good RAG system should retrieve the exact statement rather than guess.

Exact facts

Urgent family alias	Blue Finch
Non-emergency private callback phrase	The kettle is still warm
Cat name	Juniper
Laptop nickname	Orchid
Phone nickname	Pebble
Emergency fund target	18,000 fictional credits
Current emergency fund	14,750 fictional credits
Large-purchase waiting period	72 hours
Large-purchase threshold	250 fictional credits
RAG target Recall@5	Above 0.90
RAG target MRR	Above 0.80
2027 private trip dates	18-24 September 2027

Negative facts - do not invent alternatives

Mira does not hide a spare key outside her home. She has no routine medication in this synthetic record. She does not want a promotion requiring more than 30% travel. She does not store recovery codes in email. Her preferred first name is Mira, not Miranda.

Suggested RAG test questions

1. What phrase tells Elias to call Mira privately but is not an emergency? 2. How much more does Mira need to reach her emergency fund target? 3. Which days does she work from home? 4. What are her target Recall@5 and MRR values? 5. Where is the brass compass stored? 6. What does she want someone to ask when she is stressed? 7. What is her 72-hour purchase rule? 8. What does she avoid storing in email? 9. What dates is the surprise 2027 trip planned for? 10. What incorrect name should the assistant avoid calling her?

End of synthetic corpus. Every detail in this document is fictional and exists only to test private-document retrieval, grounding, and hallucination resistance.
